

Abstract of the Disclosure

The invention concerns a method for making elements, namely gas turbine blade segments, in particular for an aircraft power train. The invention is characterized in that each blade segment comprises at least two blades, one segment being produced by injection moulding of metal powder of several blades. The invention also concerns such a blade segment.